

Be your own boss

Start your own business as an entrepreneurship major! If your goal is to become a creatively-minded businessperson that can recognize and act on unique opportunities, then an entrepreneurship degree is right for you. This entrepreneurship program teaches you the business of innovation, principles of economics and financial management—just to name a few. As an entrepreneurship major, you will gain a solid understanding of the many facets of business, including raising capital, valuing your business, negotiation and much more.

You'll study with professors who have personal experience in the business world as entrepreneurs themselves. They'll introduce guests from the local business community to speak, act as guest teachers and provide you with projects that affect real-life business decisions—which is what you'll need to start a business of your own.

Details of the entrepreneurship bachelor's program

- Learn business strategy and the legal environment of business
- Understand raising capital, valuing your business and negotiation
- Gain on-the-job experience through an internship placement

“The amazing work experience ... made me a more mature and confident person. It helped me realize I am capable of anything.”

Francesca De Nes, class of 2020
