

Discover your strengths

Being undecided about what you want to study is OK. Flexibility, exploration and challenge can be an exciting part of the journey to making a decision about your future career. With an undeclared major, your professors will help you learn more about yourself, identify your strong points and hone your interests to find the perfect fit for you.

You will test the waters to see which subjects engage and motivate you, and develop essential critical thinking, writing and analytical skills. You will also improve your information and technological literacy through the five themes of our core curriculum, the Dialogues.

Identify opportunity

It's important to love what you do. And we're ready to help you find your passion. You'll take an assessment to develop a personal interest profile through Lynn 101, a program designed to help you explore career options to guide you toward a major you love.

What you'll study through the Dialogues

- Self and society
- Justice and civic life
- Belief and reason
- Quantitative reasoning
- Scientific literacy

“Growing up in a small town in South Carolina, there wasn't much diversity. But, at Lynn, I have classmates from Iran and West Africa— two of my best friends are from Haiti and Italy!”

Marisa McGrady '21, South Carolina, undecided
